BE ON THE LOOKOUT FOR BOXWOOD BLIGHT

Boxwood blight, a serious invasive fungal disease of boxwood, was confirmed in the Purdue Plant and Pest Diagnostic Lab recently on samples sent by IN Department of Natural Resources (IDNR) inspectors. This fungal disease infests shrubs that are members of the popular Buxaceae family.

Twenty Indiana counties received shipments of infected boxwood plants in May including Allen, Grant and Wells.

According to the IDNR, the disease causes rapid defoliation, which typically starts on the bottom of the plant and moves toward the top. Infection can spread to surrounding plants from a single infected plant.

Purdue Extension specialists, Gail Ruhl, Tom Creswell, and Janna Beckerman, prepared a publication, Boxwood Blight (BP-203-W), to provide more details and management options. This publication is available at the following link: extension.purdue.edu/extmedia/BP/BP-203-W.pdf

These best management practices will help prevent introducing the boxwood blight fungus:

Purchase boxwood plants from reputable nurseries that participate in a boxwood blight compliance agreement. Do not shear boxwoods when they are wet to reduce the chance of spreading disease.

Collect and remove debris from pruning or shearing operations that involve infected plants; do not compost debris close to boxwood plants.

Avoid introducing new boxwood plants to landscapes that already have large, historically important boxwoods.

Professional applicators may apply fungicides in a rotation every seven to 14 days to protect susceptible boxwoods.

If you suspect boxwood blight, send samples of the suspected plant to the Purdue Plant and Pest Diagnostic Laboratory (PPDL) for diagnosis. Wrap symptomatic leaves and stems in dry newspaper and seal them in

from the American Counseling Association
 Today's streets and highways are more crowded than ever. If you're driving almost anywhere these days you're often encountering bad drivers, traffic jams and road construction.

The stress and anger that go along with driving frustrations is a fairly common occurrence, but when they build to the point that you become an aggressive driver yourself, it's a real problem.

"Road rage" is generally described as uncontrolled anger at the actions of another driver. In extreme cases it's more than simply being angry and upset. It can lead to aggressive and violent behavior behind the wheel, including intentionally hitting the car of the driver who has upset you, or getting out of your car to engage in a physical confrontation. In some cases the angry driver will have a weapon and will threaten or harm the other driver.

Clearly any such out of control actions are illegal, dangerous and likely to cause harm to you and those around you. If you have experienced a form of out of control road rage, it is vital that you seek professional assistance. This is a condition that needs anger management help. A professional counselor has a variety of techniques to help someone understand and control such reactions.

For most of us, however, the anger we feel behind the wheel doesn't result in violent behavior but can lead to dangerous driving. You might find yourself cutting off others, tailgating, speeding, flashing your lights or honking your horn. All are signs of aggressive driving and dangerous as they are likely to provoke the other driver. And remember, none of those actions are going to change anything about how that other person drives.

Instead, it's important for you to control your anger. Take a second to remind yourself that what is happening isn't your fault and that it's outside your control. Next, take action to relax yourself. Tune in to something soothing and enjoyable on the radio. Take the time to slowly count to 10. Try concentrating on individual parts of your body and consciously think about relaxing your muscles.

When your anger controls you, then you become less alert in relation to your driving and traffic situations that might occur suddenly. And if anger while driving happens frequently, even if not escalating to road rage, and you can't control it, consider learning about relaxation training or an anger management course.

HOLIDAY WALK

Oh, the crisp, snowy evenings that November can bring. Hopefully Mother Nature will regale us again for the seventh annual Festival of Trees and Holiday Walk, Friday, November 16, 2018. Historic Warren, an Indiana Mainstreet initiative, is planning to bring the town alive again with the lights, sounds and smells of the Thanksgiving and Christmas seasons.

The promotion committee would like to invite you to join in the festivities by having your business, family, club or church group decorate a tree. We have a few donated trees if you are in need of one to decorate. The committee will help assign your tree a spot in one of the downtown businesses or you may also decorate an existing outdoor evergreen in the downtown area! Again this year we will have a winner from each of three categories: adult organization/business, youth organization and individual/family. We will also have a Queens Choice selected by the 2018 Miss Warren. Each winner will receive $50 in Warren Chamber Gift Certificates to help you get your Christmas shopping started off with our local businesses!

As before, the Holiday Walk and Festival of Trees will coincide with one another and be held from 5:00 - 8:00 pm on Friday, November 16th. Participating businesses will open their doors to offer holiday goodies and special deals. If you have a home based business and would like to participate in the Holiday Walk, please contact us at historicwarrenindiana@gmail.com or by contacting Becky Souder at East of Chicago Pizza by Monday, October 22nd.

The Historic Warren Board is pleased to host this evening. Please help adorn our small town by decorating a tree and then join us in the evening of the event to start your holiday shopping season by supporting the businesses in our "small town with a big heart"! If you have questions, please email historicwarrenindiana@gmail.com.

On December 12, 1992, Southern Wells Elementary School caught fire and burned down. Warren, Inc. board members offered their building to Southern Wells to house their children until they could build a new building.

On December 19, volunteers from the Warren community helped vacate the entire KBC building. People who had rented rooms found other facilities. Party reservations were moved to somewhere else. The Museum that was on the second floor, at that time, was boxed up and put in storage.

On Monday, December 21, volunteers from the Southern Wells community arrived to ready the building for their children. Donations of paint, school furnishings and material began coming from areas far from the two communities. On January 4 the building was ready for the first bus load of kids.

For their efforts, the communities of Warren and Southern Wells were given the 1992-93 Midland Community Service Award which honors a community that has pulled together to overcome a major problem.

This award was developed by residents of Midland, Texas after the 1987 rescue of 18 month old Jessica McClure from an abandoned water well. We were chosen from 130 entries across the United States.

I mention this about Southern Wells, because it not only helped them out in a time of need, but was a turning point in the Civic Center history. Our building was in need of repairs at the time and our finances were low. By letting Southern Wells in, the rooms were painted, carpet on the floors and other things repaired. More next time.

CHAUTAUQUA

Twenty members of the Chautauqua Literary Club met in the Calico Room October 5, 2018, to open the Season of meetings.

President Suellen Jones welcomed the group and led repeating the Collect. Roll Call response was "A Lady of Warren Area or Great Ladies."

Many admired ladies who were the originators of developments both of the past and present were mentioned as being special to each of the members present. These answers led right into the program, "Admired Ladies of Warren," being presented by Denny Stroud.

Denny broke the subjects into different groups – the first being the organizations and clubs first developed in the area.

Chautauqua was the first organized club in Huntington County--1887

Warren Weavers Club was organized in 1952 be a large number of women who loved weaving, sewing, quilting, and fellow-shiping while engaging in their craft.

The 1st Homemakers Extention Club—1938. This was the first club of this area formed in Salamonie Townshsip. Many of the ladies participated in many clubs.

Mothers of World War II Veterans—1943.

Each of these groups were organized with many members.

The 2nd group to show was Ladies In Business. MANY ladies came to mind as working in flower shops, beauty shops, retail stores, telephone operators, teachers, funeral homes, and so many other fields of endeavor. How many ladies can you think of that fit in this category?

Education was another major effort of the women. January 1926 Mrs. Sam Good and Mrs. Elijah Bonham met with the Town Council asking for a room to establish a Kindergarten class for 4-6 year olds who were students in township Sunday School classes. It was agreed upon, and on December 7, 1926, the 1st program was held at the Methodist Church. In 1927 the Tri Kappa organization took over and supported the Kindergarten program, meeting above the City Hall, until included in the school.

Denny highlighted a few ladies that were very well known by their efforts in establishing Warren as a special up-to-date community.

Irene Treat—a teacher for 35 years in the Salamonie community school system. She not only was active in many organizations, she also became a certified EMS attendant at 63 years of age, going on many "runs" with the ambulance.

Ella Blair—well-known Nighttime Warren Switchboard operator for almost 60 years. She worked from 1914-1959 with a beginning salary of $7.00 a week. She even took her small sons to work with her where they spent the night in a bed furnished by the telephone company. It was recalled that she was the last switchboard operator to retire in the State. She knew all the information that was happening anywhere in town, and could direct people's calls to where the person was at that time. After she retired, she became active helping people do crafts.

Pearl "Bart" Bartholomew—began teaching in 1906, left in 1908 to teach in different

From 1931 – 1957 she was the Huntington County Attendance Officer.

Pearl also worked in the Government, at George Washington College. She later moved back to Warren and opened "The Hat Shop" on the corner of 1st and Wayne, drove as she pleased, and was an extremely intelligent, wise, innovative lady remembered fondly.

Mary Jane Adsit was another innovative lady, starting up the Boy Scout program and stayed involved for 20 years, worked at McFarren's store for years, held the office of Clerk, and Deputy Clerk for a time.

She is a completely knowledgeable person about the the families, people, and activities in the community, schools, and businesses in the Warren area.

These are only the highlights of the efforts of these and so many other women who made Warren a productive, interesting, and successful community for families. Denny has written historical articles for the papers that are very worthwhile reading.

DNR TO STOCK TROUT IN FORT WAYNE AND HUNTINGTON PONDS

The DNR will stock 300 rainbow trout measuring 12-14 inches long in ponds at Shoaff Park in Fort Wayne and Memorial Park in Huntington for two family fishing events set for Saturday, Oct. 20.

The purpose of the stocking program is to offer an exciting and safe way for families and new anglers to experience the fun of fishing.

Both fishing events are scheduled to run from 8 to 10 a.m. No trout fishing will be allowed before the events. Participants will be asked to register before fishing. All anglers age 18 and older must have a valid Indiana fishing license and trout stamp. The catch limit per angler is five trout.

Shoaff Park is on Fort Wayne's northeast side at 6401 St. Joe Road. The pond is at the west end of the park down by the St. Joseph River. Memorial Park is west of downtown Huntington at 1200 West Park Drive. The park has two ponds but only the north pond will be stocked.

DNR staff will be at Shoaff Park to provide basic instructions on fishing, lend fishing cane-poles and rod-reel combinations to first-time anglers, and hand out red worms and bee moths for bait.

This is the fourth year of the event. Last year 109 people participated, including 62 youngsters.

This year the DNR is placing small, orange-colored, plastic tags on many of the trout stocked at Shoaff Park to help count the overall number caught during and after the event. Small canisters will be posted onsite for anglers to remove the tag and return them to the DNR.

For more information on the Shoaff Park event, contact the Fort Wayne Parks Department at 260-427-6000 or the DNR at 260-244-6805.

For the Memorial Park event, the Huntington Parks and Recreation Department will provide a limited supply of fishing rods, lend reels to new anglers, and provide bait. Youngsters at Memorial Park will also have an opportunity to develop their fishing skills by casting for "backyard bass," which are colorful plastic fish placed nearby on land to make fishing easier.

The stocking at Memorial Park is the first in what could become an annual fishing event, depending on angler interest and catch.

For more information on the Memorial Park stocking, contact the Huntington park office at 260-358-2323 or see facebook.com/HuntingtonParks.

FINDING RELIEF FROM ARTHRITIS PAIN DURING COLD WEATHER

With cold weather just around the corner, some people who cope with arthritis pain are steeling themselves for winter aches and pains. They're looking for practical ways to minimize pain during the winter months.

Ashley Wilson, an occupational therapist with Parkview Huntington Hospital's Rehab and Wellness Center, frequently hears patients say that they are able to predict a change in weather based on the way their joints feel.

"Recently, a patient told me emphatically that it was going to rain in the next 36 hours – she could just "feel it," says Wilson. "Arthritis does tend to get worse in the colder weather. It's not an old wives' tale. There's science to back it up."

Late fall and winter weather can contribute to arthritis pain in specific ways, says Wilson, referring to information from the Arthritis Foundation. Wet weather, declines in temperature and storms are associated with changes in barometric pressure that can cause swelling inside the joints.

"In addition, when the weather is cold and wet, we're less likely to exercise and be active," she adds, "which means joints are more likely to 'stiffen up.' Plus, the darker months of winter tend to increase the risk of depression, which, in turn, increases sensitivity to pain."

For people who struggle with arthritis pain and stiffness, Wilson offers nine tips for finding relief despite the bone-chilling cold of winter weather:

Reduce pressure and discomfort in your hands when working with objects: Wrap foam/cloth/tape around handles to cushion the grip.

Supplement your vitamin D intake. Low levels are associated with sensitivity to arthritis pain.

Hydrate and eat anti-inflammatory foods. Load up on foods that can contain substances that help reduce inflammation. Omega 3 fatty acid is found in oily fish, such as salmon, sardines, mackerel, herring and tuna. Catechins, or flavonoids, are found in freshly brewed teas, plus apples, blackberries, cherries, guava, pears, sweet potatoes and fava beans. Dark chocolate also contains catechins, but be careful to consume only an ounce or so (a couple of small squares) per day due to fat content.

Avoid/eat fewer foods that promote inflammation. Some foods and ingredients can actually make pain and inflammation worse. Try to reduce your intake of sugar, high fructose corn syrup, refined carbohydrates (low-fiber breads, pastry, etc.), and red meats.

Dress warmly and layer up: Wear gloves or mittens and warm socks, and remove any damp clothing. If you need to maintain your dexterity while working indoors, but you tend to get cold hands, try gloves without fingertips.

Reduce pain before/during/after activities: Apply heat or cold to your joints, for example. Swimming or bathing in warm water can help, too.

Reduce pain while sleeping: Elevate and support your arms and legs to take stress off of joints.

Use topical pain relief if discomfort is too great: There are many gels, creams and sprays on the market that can provide temporary relief from pain. However, read labels and use these products with care.

Nurture your energy: Stay active with light exercise – pace yourself and take frequent breaks. Take care to eat with nutrition in mind, and get enough sleep. Sleep experts recommend adults get at least eight hours of sleep per night for energy and cognitive health.

If pain lingers or is really stubborn, consider speaking with an occupational or physical therapy professional. They are trained to help devise adaptations in daily routines to minimize arthritic pain, as well as strategies to help you compensate.

The latter will demonstrate where to find coroners records and how to mine them for genealogy research clues. Tennant, a professional genealogist, nationally-known speaker and internationally-known blogger, will present "Trolling Virtual Cemeteries and Using Cemetery Records," in which she will talk about the pros and cons of FindAGrave, BillionGraves and DeceasedOnline. Tennant will also be available for a 30-minute question and answer session.

Additionally, Sarah Halter, executive director of the Indiana Medical History Museum, will give a brown bag lunch lecture titled "What Killed Your Ancestors?," examining 19th century medicine, the accuracy of information and names of certain diseases and what they mean.
